

We are 1/3 of the way through December already, and it's looking like winter weather is finally catching up. This week, freezing temperatures are forecasted to hit a lot of the United States, and you should be worried.

National weather forecasts say that arctic temperatures are set to blanket the states from Montana to the Gulf Coast and set freezing records along the way. Meanwhile Texans are having flashbacks to the disaster of 2021 when the power grid went down due to powerplants freezing up. The next week is not looking great, if you're not prepared that is.

If you have pipes, tanks, drums, valves, totes, concrete, or just about anything else that needs to be protected from the cold, you need to give Powerblanket a call right now. When winter temperatures are this extreme, insulation and "hoping for the best" are not reliable freeze protection strategies. Protecting your processes and critical materials from freezing up this week shouldn't be stressful. Call us today to talk to one of our heating experts and give yourself some peace of mind this winter.

Have an unusual application that needs heat? Need a heat source that is made to your specifications? Then STS can help you get the answer to your problems.
